HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

THE PRESIDENT GOES TO NEW YORK.

TO MEET HIS BRIDE,

And has an hour's tête-à-tête, at which "Nan Sed" — preparations at Washington for the interesting event — invitations sent out to a very select few — sketch of the happy woman.

THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON CITY, May 31.—The blissful event—the marriage of President Cleveland and Miss Folsom—which is to take place here next Wednesday, is about to beon two days the subject of conversation over the country. The president of the senate—the speaker of the house—legislators at both ends of the capitol—forget the cares of office, and the tariff and silver question, and big and little bills, and clear about it plausibly. In fact, everybody is gossiping about the wedding. Speaker Carlisle is credited with criticising in a perfunctory manner the president's purpose by saying that "It's no regular order, and the chair has no objection."

Congressman Sprague, of New York, voicing the feeling of everybody, says: "The president is to be congratulated; the country is to be congratulated, and we are all glad at the president's marriage. The presence of the president's wife at the executive mansion will add another charm to official life in Washington."

The president left Washington at 4:15 Sunday afternoon on a special car for New York, to attend Decatur Day exercises in New York and Brooklyn. He was accompanied by Postmaster General and Mrs. Vilas, Secretary and Mrs. Endicott, Secretary Lamar and Mrs. Lamont. The president, after participating in the memorial exercises in New York, and addressing the Postmaster General Vilas, addresses at the academy of music in New York at night, will return by a late special train to Washington, arriving here Tuesday morning.

Miss Cleveland, who is here, will be busily engaged Tuesday and Wednesday superintending the details of the White House decorations and putting things in order for the president's reception.

The invitation to the wedding was issued Saturday. They are only addressed to the members of the cabinet. They are from the president, and were delivered in the forenoon to each cabinet officer by Col. Lamont. The note, entirely in the oven and almost microscopic chirography of the president, ran as follows:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, May 29.—After DEAR MR. —— Next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock I am to be married to Miss Folsom at the White House. You will be very happy to have us [and Mrs. ——] added in the note to the married member of the cabinet present on that occasion.

Gracious Cleveland."

The wedding will occur in the blue parlor, one of the rooms that President Arthur had Tiffany decorated. It is shaped is oval, the southern end of it occupying the lower story of the gracefully-curved projection which is so conspicuous a feature in all pictures of the White House taken from the river side. It is decorated with a chandelier in robin-egg blue, with silver ornaments. There is some beautiful treasury on the ceiling, and the room is lighted with a fine silver-and-glass chandelier and bracket fixtures, against remarkably beautiful scenes of iridescent and colored glass. It is in the blue room that the president receives all foreign envoys. And at New Year's and other receptions the receiving stands in the blue room.

The collector of the treasury will be seated in the state department, decorated in green and gold, at the west end of the mansion and on the south side of the corridor just beyond the red parlor. Following the wedding there will be no wedding journey nor even the usually inevitable trip from the church or the bride's home to the groom's residence. The president can not leave Washington to go to Congress, so he will not be ready for his occupancy for weeks yet, probably two months. The president will make extensive alterations in the house and it will hardly be ready before the early part of August.

The ladies of the cabinet will all call at the White House Saturday morning to see Miss Cleveland, and were much surprised to learn that she had not arrived in time of seeing her, they went up to the library and to the dining room to congratulate her. They found her in a state of well-contained, dignified, and well-subdued joy, a certain new twinkle and brightness in his eye, telling of anxiety set aside, suspense relieved, and felicity assured. To their glowing pictures of the social glory that was adding to his administration the brilliant and the most brilliant with a wife in the White House, the president gave a quiet smile, yet indicated that he was "unmarrying the little bride all for himself and a home life, and not for the public." His manner was full of tenderness as he spoke of his bride-elect, and the ladies were deeply affected by the touch of sentiment newly discovered to them in him. Mrs. and Miss Folsom will arrive here Tuesday night or Wednesday morning of Wednesday afternoon, to the great joy of Miss Cleveland's friends. The party will go directly to the White House. The party to the announcement of the marriage. The whole ceremony will be conducted with as little ostentation as possible, and the party to be present is limited to twenty-two. Miss Cleveland and Mrs. Hoyt will be the only members of the president's family present, and will arrive in time to receive the Folsom party on their arrival from New York. Mrs. Carlisle's mother, and her cousin, Mr. Benjamin Folsom, who has been traveling with them abroad, and who, as nearest relative, will give the bride away; Secretary Bayard, Secretary and Mrs. Mansing, Secretary and Mrs. Endicott, Secretary and Mrs. Vilas, Secretary and Mrs. Lamont, Postmaster General and Mrs. Vilas, Attorney General Carlisle and his mother, Mrs. Hubbard, and the president's best man, Mr. Wilson Hissell. Col. and Mrs. Lamont will compose the party witnessing the ceremony and partaking of the elaborate wedding supper afterward to be served in the state dining room. The Marine band, stationed in the entrance hall, will play the appropriate march as the bride party comes down the parlor, and other sections during the evening. Carlisle has come to Attorney General Carlisle, and his ultimatum of "no swallow-tail coat" that went forth when the president bade him to the first state dinner honor of the cabinet, is set aside. Society hails breathlessly on the question, "Will the president go to the wedding?" and will he have the temerity to refuse the invitation to his chisel's wedding? Or will he go to the White House in a frock-coat?"

Among the earliest callers at the White House Saturday morning were three ladies, one of whom wanted an invitation card to the wedding; another wanted to bespeak some of the wedding flowers, and the third came to pre-empt a slice of wedding-cake.

ARRIVED AT NEW YORK.

The National Bridgeman Pays His Future Wife a Visit.

New York, May 31.—President Cleveland and party arrived here 10:30 Sunday night. The president was met at the Pennsylvania depot by Mr. Folger, Postmaster General, and a carriage and were driven to the Gilsey house, where the president remained with Miss Folsom until 12:30. The president then went to the residence of Secretary Whitney, whose guest he will be during his stay here.

THE BRIDE'S BIOGRAPHY.

That Import Question, Her Age, Settled — Her Characteristics.

THE PRESIDENT'S BRIDE.

BUFFALO, May 31.—Until Sunday The Buffalo Courier has contained no mention of President Cleveland's engagement to Miss Folsom. That paper is supposed in this part of the state to speak for the president officially, and the following editorial was read with much interest:

"Now that official announcement has been given of the coming marriage of President Cleveland and Miss Folsom for June 1. The Courier, which has refrained from adding to the unlimited and cruel preliminary gossip on the subject, finds it proper to say a few words concerning the approaching event. The wedding date is the only life of the president's bride-elect have been so often referred to in print of late that it would be superfluous again to go into details concerning them, but not innumerable errors crept into these unauthenticated sketches."

"Miss Folsom, whose Christian name by the way is Frances, but Frank, was born in the year 1859, and will be 23 years old July 2. She is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Leitchworth, Franklin street. At the time of Mr. Folsom's death in 1875, they were living at the Tift house. After the funeral they went to Medina, where Mrs. Harmon, Mrs. Folsom's widowed mother, resided. The Harmon family had good social position and was of considerable value in the social circles, including the property. While in Medina Miss Folsom was a pupil at the high school. Returning to Buffalo in a few years Frank entered the Central school. One of the Central school teachers has said of her that Frank learned very readily and seemed to remember equally well, and that she always put a little of herself into her recitations. While enrolled as a pupil at the Central she has often been to get transferred to the boys' school, and as is reported, she inserted the initial letter "C" after Frank, calling herself "Frank Clara." This explains why her name now often erroneously appears with the initial C. She was a regular attendant of the Central school, particularly of the singing class, and participated in the various exercises, from the "day of the dead" to the day of the living, where a grand parade of military and civic societies took place. The school was one of the largest and most pleasing to the eye seen in the city for many a day, and called out applause from the crowds of citizens which thronged the line of march."

Gen. W. T. Sherman's presence, and that of his post, Rauson, No. 131 of St. Louis, was another feature of the day which delighted the hearts of the soldiers. When the graves in the various cemeteries had been appropriately decorated, and proper alabaster had been made to the virtues and patriotic qualities of the dead, the procession, from the "day of the dead" to the day of the living, where a grand parade of military and civic societies took place. The school was one of the largest and most pleasing to the eye seen in the city for many a day, and called out applause from the crowds of citizens which thronged the line of march."

Gen. Sherman came to visit the tomb of his friend, Col. Ramsay. When the event was talked of at St. Louis, he was requested to appear, and when he came he was received with a round of applause, and when he inserted the initial letter "C" after Frank, calling herself "Frank Clara." This explains why her name now often erroneously appears with the initial C. The Claim Made for the Tariff Bill by its Friends.

WASHINGTON CITY, May 31.—It was announced last week that Morrow would call up his tariff bill as soon as the legislative and judicial bills are passed; but that is denied authority. Morrow says that will not let the tariff conflict with consideration of appropriation bills. In connection with this matter a good deal of corridor talk has been on the subject, and it is asserted that the tariff will vote upon the bill.

The car was an ordinary fruit car, and its cargo of flowers and the cases in which they were packed weighed several tons.

On each side of the car was a canvas about ten feet square with a bust picture of Gen. Grant in the center, and around it the inscription "California's tribute to the old hero." The car was packed with flowers and the cases in which they were packed weighed several tons
